The number of films approved for general public exhibition during the year 1956 was 294. The largest number was of Hindi films—121, followed by 53 films in Bengali, 50 in Tamil, 27 in Telugu, 14 in Kannada, 13 in Marathi, 5 in Malayalam, 4 in Assamese, 3 in Gujarati, 2 each in Oriya, and Urdu. There were no films in Punjabi and Kashmiri languages.

In 1956 the Central Board of Film Censors examined 3,244 films, of which 3,101 were given 'U' and 96 'A' certificates. This number included 2,330 foreign and 867 Indian films (including shorts). The number of films which were refused certificates was 47, of which 46 were foreign films. The total length excised from films was 73,923 feet.

Bombay continued to be the major centre of production, Madras and Calcutta taking the second and third place respectively. About 47% of the total number of films were produced in Bombay, 33% in Madras and 20% in Calcutta. Bombay was the principal centre of production of Hindi films, Madras of Tamil and Telugu films and Calcutta of Bengali films.

Fantasies, social problems, mythological stories, lives of saints and romantic love provided material for feature films.

The year witnessed further progress in the scope and influence of documentaries, the bulk of which continued to be produced by the Central and State Governments. During the year, the Films Division produced 35 documentaries through its own units. Nine documentaries were produced on behalf of the Films Division by private producers. Three films were taken over for distribution from a State Government. A children's magazine was also produced during the year. The documentaries covered a wide range of subjects, like "Ballot Boxes", "Khajuraho", "Madurai", "Deccan Table Land", "UNESCO and India", "Nepal and its People." Mention, in particular, may be made of the documentary "Gotama the Buddha", produced by Bimal Roy Productions on behalf of the Films Division. This full-length documentary unfolds the story of Buddhism, narrates the life of the Buddha and presents his salient teachings. The story is built and developed mainly through sculptures and paintings of well-known traditions such as Sanchi, Amaravati, Nagarjunakonda, Gandhara and Ajanta and similar material from other countries like Tibet, Central Asia, China, Indonesia, Burma and Ceylon. The commentary is based upon and closely follows the original Buddhist texts. It is interspersed with the recitation of appropriate verses from the original texts. The music follows the pattern of the Indian classical and folk melodies.

The Films Division continued to bring out the weekly newsreel "Indian News Review". Besides significant events of Indian life, items of current interest from foreign countries were also included in it. The foreign items were received from various newsreel organisations as part of the arrangement for free exchange of newsreel material. In order to obtain suitable and adequate coverage of events abroad in connection with the visits of the Vice-President to Africa and East Asia, the Prime Minister's visit to Saudi Arabia and the President's visit to Nepal, arrangements were made to depute cameramen abroad.

The documentaries and newsreels for theatrical distribution in the country were produced in 35 mm. in Hindi, Bengali, Tamil, Telugu and English. Copies meant for circulation through the Central and State Government mobile vans were reduced to 16 mm. size and supplied in 12 languages, viz., Hindi, Assamese, Bengali, Gujarati, Marathi, Kannada, Kashmiri, Oriya, Malayalam, Panjabi, Tamil and Telugu. The mobile vans, 352 in all, covered largely the rural areas.

The State Awards for the best films produced in India and approved for public exhibition during the year 1955 were distributed at a special function in New Delhi in September 1956. At the end of 1956, there were 255 producing concerns, about 900 distributing agencies, 60 studios and 40 laboratories in India. The total number of people employed in the industry was about a lakh, the capital invested about Rs. 42 crores and the gross annual income about Rs. 25 crores. The number of cinemas at the end of 1956 was 3,829 including 996 touring and temporary cinemas. The annual attendance at cinemas was estimated at 60 crores.

The film industry celebrated in December 1956 the twenty-fifth anniversary of the advent of the talkie in India. An important part of these celebrations was the screening of some of the outstanding Indian films produced during the last twenty-five years. A symposium on the Film and the Nation, meetings to honour the pioneers of the Indian talkie, and a variety show by film stars were other features of the celebrations.

In pursuance of the recommendations of the Film Enquiry Committee and the resolutions passed in the Rajya Sabha and the Lok Sabha urging Government to take steps for improvement in the standard of films, it was decided by Government to set up a National Film Board. A Bill to that effect was introduced in the Rajya Sabha on 10th December 1956. It is provided in the Bill that the Board will have three constituent units, namely, a Film Certification Bureau, a Film Production Bureau and a Film Institute.

The Children's Film Society, which was registered under the Societies Registration Act in May 1955, completed another feature film entitled "Jaldeep". Besides, the Society made 8 short films, four being adaptations of British films and four of Soviet films, for children.

Indian films were exported to a number of foreign countries, such as Pakistan, Iraq, Malaya, Indo-China, Thailand, Burma and East Africa.
